

What to Expect at Your Child's Feedback Session

Practitioners - to edit this document and make it your own, please choose File --> Make a Copy or Download.

I am looking forward to meeting with your child to share what we've learned about their amazing brain! Here is what to expect during our session.

- Your child can choose to meet with me 1-1, or with you present.
- We will write down what we talk about in their Brain Building Book so that you can read it together or share with loved ones.
- Children process information in many different ways. That's ok! The graphic to the right shows the different responses that are common during a feedback session.
- While there is a lot to know about their brain, our goal is to bring your child one more step on their journey to understanding themselves. Today, that may be a big step, or just a small step. Either way, you will leave with the language to continue the conversation.
- I will be available for questions after our session. Please follow up to make sure you have what you need to feel confident supporting your child moving forward.

Thank you and see you soon!

YOUR CHILD MIGHT:	THEY ALSO MIGHT:
 Sit still	 Move around
 Listen attentively	 Have many ideas, get distracted
 Get through all the main points	 Get through one idea
 Take in all of the information	 Get overwhelmed and need to stop
 "Get it" right away	 Take days or months to process

All of these are okay!

Developed by Drs. Megan Helmen & Liz Angoff
Learn more at www.BrainBuildingBook.com